More U.S. Airlines Arriving on Time

Domestic flights are more punctual than in previous decades

New York

U.S. airlines are more punctual and less likely to lose your bag than at any time in more than two decades.

Travelers still have to put up with packed planes, rising fees and unpredictable security lines, but they are late to fewer business meetings and are not missing as many chances to tuck their kids into bed.

Nearly 84 percent of domestic flights arrived within 15 minutes of their scheduled time in the first half of the year — the best performance since the government started keeping track in 1988.

The improvement over the first six months of 2011, when 77 percent of flights were on time, is mostly a result of good weather and fewer planes in the sky because of the weak economy.

"My flights this year have been way better," said Amanda Schuier, a sales manager for a Kansas City, Mo., trucking supplier who flies roughly four times a week.

Good for Everyone

When flights are on time, it isn't just good for passengers — it also helps the airlines' bottom lines. The industry says it costs an average of $75 a minute to operate a plane. Last year, domestic delays cost airlines an estimated $5.2 billion. U.S. airlines made a combined $577 million in profit last year. To better improve their on-time performance, airlines are using better technology, more realistic schedules, timely delivery of food and fuel and improved boarding procedures. (AP)

"In the past six months, I've only had two delays."

Airlines are also doing a better job of handling bags. Fewer than three suitcases per 1,000 passengers were reported lost, damaged or delayed from January through June, a record low.

If the current pace continues, the airlines will beat their best full-year performance, recorded in 1991, when nearly 83 percent of flights arrived on time. The worst full year was 2000, when just 73 percent of flights arrived on time, according to Bureau of Transportation Statistics data. SCOTT MAYEROWITZ (AP)

'I Committed a Crime'

Observer: Wife of Chinese politician confesses to murder

Beijing

China's most widely anticipated trial in a generation ended Thursday less than eight hours after it began, with Gu Kailai — the wife of deposed Communist Party leader Bo Xilai — confessing that she poisoned a British businessman who she believed threatened her son, according to an inside observer's courtroom account.

The observer's account, buttressed by an official court statement, detailed a dramatic case — including an emailed threat purportedly from the victim, Neil Heywood, and a description of how Gu poured a concoction of cyanide into Heywood's mouth.

"I committed a crime that brought negative consequences to the party and the country," Gu told the court, according to the courtroom spectator.

"I am willing to receive any pun-

The Accused

Gu Kailai, the 53-year-old wife of onetime Communist Party rising star Bo Xilai, is said to have risen out of a trying childhood during nationwide upheaval to become a prominent lawyer and high-flying politician's wife. She was skilled at turning on the charm, yet quick to turn hostile when crossed. She was accused of poisoning British businessman Neil Heywood after a falling out, and on Thursday, she pleaded guilty to the charges.

Other Main Players

Here's a look at the other faces in China's political crisis:

BO XILAI

Bo, 64, was the flamboyant Communist Party secretary of Chongqing, the city's top official, and one of China's most prominent political figures until his ouster this year. Bo is under a separate party investigation for unspecified wrongdoings.

NEIL HEYWOOD

A British businessman and Bo family friend, Heywood's body was found in a Chongqing hotel in November. Chinese authorities originally blamed his death on excess drinking or a heart attack, and his body was cremated without an autopsy. (AP)

U.S. Begins Agent Orange Cleanup

Danang, Vietnam

The U.S. began a landmark project Thursday to clean up a dangerous chemical left from the defoliant Agent Orange, 50 years after U.S. planes first sprayed it on Vietnam's jungles to destroy enemy cover.

Dioxin, which has been linked to cancer, birth defects and other disabilities, will be removed from the site of a former U.S. air base in Danang in central Vietnam. The effort is seen as a long-overdue step toward removing a thorn in relations between the former foes nearly four decades after the Vietnam War ended.

The $43 million joint project with Vietnam is expected to be completed in four years.

The U.S. has quibbled for years ishment," Gu said calmly, according to the observer. Gu asked for leniency for her aide, Zhang Xiaojun, who was accused of helping her carry out the murder.

The case sparked China's most serious political crisis in decades, derailing Bo's expected promotion this year. It also provoked anger among Bo's supporters and revealed fissures in the top ranks of the Communist Party.

With Gu's swift trial — the sentence is expected at a later date — the party seems anxious to move past the episode before a crucial leadership transition this year.

The only reporters allowed inside the courtroom were from state-run Xinhua news agency and CCTV, typical for sensitive cases in this tightly controlled country.

In Gu's case, the bland court statement said Gu "did not contest" the case. But the courtroom observer said Gu confessed.

Court officials announced that four Chongqing policemen will be put on trial Friday for trying to help Gu cover up the crime. The announcement was the first official notice that more people were involved in Heywood's death and the subsequent cover-up. KEITH B. RICHBURG (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Time Machines

My weirdest compulsive quirk: When I'm entering or exiting a Metro station, I must look at the clock on the kiosk. Sometimes it's busted. And there's the occasional hurdle, such as at Farragut North, where the clock doesn't face the L Street entrance. (The extra steps are totally worth it.)

But my ritual never completely failed until a recent trip between Navy Yard and McPherson Square, when I couldn't find the time at either station.

Had the clocks been stolen? What were these big, blank screens that seemed to have taken their place? Would I need to start wearing a watch?

"The time will come back," WMATA spokesman Dan Stessel assured me. He solved the mystery of the missing clocks by explaining it's all part of Metro's new customer service action plan, a host of steps intended to improve reliability and communication. Although Stessel and his staff have beefed up Metro's Twitter presence and continue to promote the heck out of the Metro Alerts system, riders aren't getting their messages.

"We know the vast majority [of customers] — upwards of 80 percent — don't know what's happening until they show up," Stessel says.

So these LCD screens, which are replacing every ancient LED clock, will tell you absolutely everything about what's up with Metro. There will be an "at-a-glance look" at the status of all five lines, a panel devoted to elevator outages (with shuttle info) and a background that changes color to indicate service disruptions.

By Vicky Hallett

Of course, there already are electronic signs in all of Metro's stations. But those small public information displays are no match for the amount of info they're tasked with conveying. "The PIDs we know and love have to scroll through eight screens to the detriment of their primary purpose," Stessel says.

Once the new kiosk signs start doing the heavy lifting, the PIDs can focus solely on arrival times.

Stessel, who is bracing himself for the inevitable complaints when the system launches, emphasizes that the setup will be easily modifiable. The long-term goal is to make the technology station-specific to address issues that are affecting only parts of the transit network.

It sounds pretty cool, but for now, all you'll see are blank screens. WMATA expects to finish replacing each of those old clocks with screens — so far, 65 and counting — by the end of the year, when the system is scheduled to turn on.

Until then, I'll have to figure out some other way to fill my time. Maybe with brain-storming?

"There's no cute name for them yet," Stessel says. "I don't think SKIDS — Station Kiosk Information Display — is going to work."

Md. Takes Up Dog Liability Law

Legislation makes all owners responsible for pet's every action

Annapolis, Md.

Maryland's General Assembly on Thursday began work on legislation that would make the Potomac a dividing line between the country's polar opposites when it comes to liability for dog bites.

In Virginia, as in 13 other states, an owner can often avoid legal responsibility for a first bite if a pet has never before been violent. In Maryland, lawmakers' response to a recent court ruling that singled out owners of pit bulls could make owners of all dogs liable for any bite — including the first.

Holding owners strictly liable for the actions of their dogs is the way most states have gone and may sound logical to anyone caught on the closing end of a canine's cuspids. But amid repeated protests, emotional pleas from animal-rights groups and lobbying from the insurance industry, it remains unclear whether Maryland lawmakers will find consensus before their special session ends — likely next week.

The issue is a sidebar to the debate over expanding casino gambling that has brought lawmakers back to Annapolis and far from the principled stances this year, such as legalizing gay marriage, that Maryland's Democratic-controlled legislature has sought to make.

Yet strict liability for pets could affect Marylanders more directly than any recent law change. The issue has taken on urgency among numerous lawmakers who say they intend to push back against what many contend is the latest in a string of activist rulings by the state's supreme court.

In the latest instance, Maryland's Court of Appeals in May rewrote a near century-old passage of state common law in a case stemming from a 2007 attack on a Towson boy. It ruled that the mauling was one of at least seven litigated attacks in 13 years in Maryland that helped prove pit bulls are "inherently dangerous."

A Renter's Respite in D.C. Region

Washington

The weary apartment hunters of Washington, who have been plagued in recent years by rising rents, fewer vacancies, pickier landlords and periodic bidding wars, are about to get a welcome respite.

The coming surge — a whopping 6,000 new units by the end of this year — will give prospective renters a slew of new options and could even halt the upward march of monthly rental payments, according to developers, analysts and real estate professionals.

"There's going to be a paradigm shift," said Rick Gersten, chief executive of Urban Igloo, a company that helps connect renters with local landlords. "People are going to have more choices. It's going to be more difficult to retain tenants."

Much of the building is taking place in the District, including the hot H Street NE corridor and the Mount Vernon Triangle area. But units are also springing up in the close-in suburbs of Fairfax in Northern Virginia and Bethesda and Silver Spring in Maryland.

"We don't even have demand in an entire year for 6,000" new apartments, said Greg Leisch, chief executive of the Alexandria-based research firm Delta Associates. "That's going to disrupt the equilibrium in the market."

Filming Still OK On Land Near Capitol Building

Washington

Delegate Eleanor Holmes Norton says a Senate committee has matched the House by approving a bill that would allow continued commercial filming and photography on land near the Capitol.

Union Square is one of the few places around the Capitol where filming is allowed, and the future of commercial filmmaking and photography there was uncertain after the National Park Service transferred the land last year to the Architect of the Capitol.

Norton, a Democrat who represents the District of Columbia in Congress, had lobbied her colleagues to allow filming to continue.

She says she's urging committee chairs to hold hearings on expanding the areas with views of the Capitol available for filming. (AP)

JOBS

Telephone Fundraiser NW Washington, DC

If you're a progressive, social- and political-minded individual, we'd like to talk to you. In this position you will work on behalf of our clients, raising money from their members (no cold calling) to advance their missions and causes.
As a member of the Share fundraising team,
you'll raise funds for: Environmental Protection,
Women's Rights, Civil Liberties, Gay Rights and Political Activism. In this position you will see your personal contribution bring about long-lasting rewards -- for you, and for the world.

Candidates with some fundraising experience are preferred and must be able to work evening and weekend hours. You must also pass a background check.

For both PT & FT, we offer an average wage of $10 - $15/hour, flexible scheduling as well as a strong benefits package which includes: health and dental insurance, and a generous vacation plan.

Interested candidates, please contact the recruiting office at:
Phone: 202-234-3903

American midfielder Carli Lloyd celebrates after sneaking a goal past Japan's Miho Fukumoto in the women's gold medal match Thursday. Lloyd scored twice in the game.

Sweet Revenge

U.S. bounces back from a World Cup loss to secure gold over Japan

Women's Soccer

Abby Wambach didn't put on her "Greatness Has Been Found" T-shirt right away. She instead strayed from her teammates and knelt alone at midfield — and cried into a U.S. flag.

Yes, greatness has been found. And payback has been achieved.

The Americans are again on top of the women's soccer world.

They won their third-straight Olympic gold medal Thursday, beating Japan, 2-1, in a rematch of last year's World Cup final and avenging the most painful loss in their history.

"This is the dream that we've all been thinking about and feeling for the last year since the World Cup," Wambach said.

Carli Lloyd scored early in both halves, Hope Solo leaped and dived to make saves, and the entire roster found the redemption it had been seeking since that penalty kick shootout loss in Germany last summer.

Before 80,203 fans at Wembley Stadium, the teams put on a back-and-forth, don't-turn-your-head soccer showcase, proving again that these are the two premier teams in the world.

Throughout the game, Japan perhaps played just as beautifully as the Americans, using speed and discipline to dominate possession and scoring chances for long stretches.

Lloyd's goals came in the eighth and 54th minutes, making it four

Solo's Big Save

One of Japan's best chances to tie the score Thursday came in the 83rd minute, when Mana Iwabuchi fired a shot toward the far corner, but U.S. goalkeeper Hope Solo stretched out to deflect it away. (AP)

Errors Aplenty

Japan had ample opportunity to beat the U.S. for the second-straight time in a major women's soccer final, but it squandered too many scoring chances Thursday. Two shots struck the crossbar, and players also missed on several opportunities from close range. Japan played in its first Olympic final hoping to show its World Cup win last year was no fluke, and the team was a gold-medal favorite. "I felt we could come back," striker Yuki Ogimi said. "But unfortunately we could not get the result in the end." (AP) goals in the tournament for the midfielder who lost her long-held starting job weeks before the Olympics.

She got back on the field when Shannon Boxx injured her hamstring in the opening game and has started every game since.

Yuki Ogimi answered in the 63rd minute, and Mana Iwabuchi nearly had the equalizer in the 83rd — stripping the ball from captain Christie Rampone and swooping in on Solo — only to be thwarted when the goalie flung her entire body to the left to push the shot away.

80,203

The attendance for the U.S.-Japan gold medal game, breaking the previous record for Olympic women's soccer, 76,481, which was set at the Atlanta Games in 1996. (AP)

At the final whistle, Solo found herself enveloped in a group-hug celebration that unleashed a year of bottled-up frustration. Many of the players paraded with the flag and put on the celebratory T-shirts.

Wambach, the outspoken co-captain who missed the Beijing Games with a broken leg, was always the player most impassioned about the mission to get the Americans back atop the podium. She spoke of "nightmares" from the Japan defeat, and now they've been replaced by tears of happiness.

The loudest of cheers erupted when she received her gold medal, and she was the only one to get a hug from American IOC member Angela Ruggiero, who draped the medal around Wambach's neck.

The U.S. team has won four of the five Olympic titles since women's soccer was introduced at the 1996 Atlanta Games, taking silver at the 2000 Games in Sydney.

Settling for silver, the Japanese players huddled together in defeat, with coach Norio Sasaki trying to encourage them. Karina Maruyama was inconsolable. Asuna Tanaka wiped away tears.

But they were all smiles when they re-emerged for the medal ceremony. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Two Good, It's True

Domination in the decathlon puts U.S. on top of medal count

Track and Field

While Usain Bolt backed up his billing as a "living legend" by winning the Olympic 200 meters and becoming the first athlete to repeat as double Olympic sprint champion, two Americans made some history of their own.

Ashton Eaton won gold in the decathlon, dominating an event that generally crowns "the world's greatest athlete." As if that wasn't enough, two-time world champion Trey Hardee was second, giving the Americans their first one-two finish in the multitasking event since 1956. Eaton won by 198 points.

The United States had another 1-2 finish when Christian Taylor won the triple jump gold medal,

"When we are 80 or 90 years old, our grandkids are going to puff out their chests a little bit."

— TREY HARDEE, THURSDAY'S SILVER MEDALIST, TALKING ABOUT THE AMERICAN DOMINATION OF THE DECATHLON IN THE LONDON OLYMPICS.

overhauling U.S. teammate Will Claye with his fourth jump in the final. It left the United States atop the track and field medal standings, with seven gold and 24 overall, still on target to meet its goal of 30.

But it was Bolt — not surprisingly — who stole the spotlight.

"It's what I came here to do. I'm now a legend," Bolt said. "I'm also the greatest athlete to live. I've got nothing left to prove."

Undaunted by the first world record of the Olympic track meet run by 800-meter winner David Rudisha less than an hour before

Decathlon Forget "Dan vs. Dave" — the classic U.S. rivalry that fizzled 20 years ago. Ashton Eaton topped Trey Hardee in the decathlon in a dream finish for the U.S.

Triple jump Christian Taylor, left, won gold, topping U.S. teammate Will Claye, who won silver.

Still Fast as Lightning

When the stakes are the biggest, Usain Bolt is as good as gold. Putting the field far enough behind that he could slow up over his last few strides and put his left index finger to his mouth to tell any critics to shush, Bolt won the 200 meters in 19.32 seconds Thursday night, making him the only man with two Olympic titles in that event. He added it to the 100 gold he won Sunday, duplicating the 100-200 double he produced at the Beijing Games four years ago. (AP)

Did You See That?

Manteo Mitchell felt the pop in his leg and knew it wasn't good. A few hours after he finished his part in the 4x400-meter relay preliminaries Thursday in a more-than-respectable 46.1 seconds, doctors confirmed what he suspected: He had run the last 200 meters with a broken left fibula. The U.S. tied the Bahamas in the second heat in 2 minutes, 58.87 seconds — the fastest time ever run in the first round of the relay at the Olympics — to qualify for the finals. Joining them will be Oscar "The Blade Runner" Pistorius and the South African relay team, which advanced after winning an appeal of a collision in its heat. The South Africans were awarded an extra ninth lane for the final. (AP) the 200 final, Bolt was not about to be upstaged by anyone.

He dominated his favorite event almost from the starting gun and had enough of a lead to slow down at the line, bring his left index finger to his mouth and signal a "ssssshh" that was broadcast around the globe.

It should certainly silence the critics who doubted his form ahead of the Olympics. But he didn't stand a chance of hushing the 80,000-capacity crowd at the Olympic Stadium, which went wild as Bolt delivered on his promise of winning when it counts most. His 19.32-second winning time was just .02 seconds outside his winning mark at the Beijing Olympics.

Just like Sunday's victory in the 100, his junior training partner Yohan Blake stayed closest, and Warren Weir made it a full Jamaican medal sweep before Wallace Spearmon of the United States crossed in fourth place. "The guy is just on another planet right now," Spearmon said of Bolt. RAF CASERT (AP)

U.S. Proves It Has Plenty in Reserve

Bench comes to the rescue to lead team to gold medal game

Women's Basketball

Now this was something new. The U.S. women's basketball team faced its first Olympic halftime deficit in 12 years Thursday night as it tried to reach the gold medal game for the fifth-straight time. Not to worry.

The Americans took a deep breath at the break, then used a pivotal 16-6 scoring run sparked by their defensive pressure to rally for an 86-73 win over Australia. Next up is France in Saturday's final.

U.S. coach Geno Auriemma turned to his Olympic rookies to lead the way. The group — led by Tina Charles and Lindsay Whalen — pressured Australia into turnovers and bad shots, helping the U.S. continue its dominance.

"We came out in the second

Diana Taurasi, right, charges into Australia's Belinda Snellcortie.

France Advances

Singing and dancing their way around the court, France advanced to its first gold medal game with an 81-64 victory over Russia. France will play the U.S. on Saturday in a matchup of the only two unbeaten teams in the tournament. (AP) half and once we got control of the game, it took off from there," Auriemma said. "It just illustrates it's only one night. If you have a great night and the U.S. has a poor shooting night or defensive night, there goes the tournament."

Behind the inside play of 6-foot-8 Liz Cambage, the Australians shot 61 percent and led 47-43 at halftime. But with a chance at another gold medal on the line, an inspired U.S. squad regained the lead behind the play of the reserves, harassing Australia into just 4 of 18 shooting from the field in the third quarter. ## Worth Her Flyweight in Gold

BOXING: Great Britain's Nicola Adams, in blue, delivers a punishing blow to China's Ren Cancan in the final for the women's flyweight boxing title Thursday. Adams won the first Olympic gold medal in women's boxing by besting the reigning world champion 16-7 through a flurry of punches in the second round.

Storen Rolls With Changeup

Drew Storen was the Nats' closer last year. Now, he is taking a backseat to his best friend and teammate Tyler Clippard.

Last year's closer accepts lesser role upon return from DL

The Nationals

From the day Washington drafted Drew Storen out of Stanford University in 2009, the team envisioned him closing games in a pennant race just like the one the Nationals find themselves in now.

Storen negotiated for hours — not weeks or months — then signed his contract and got to work. By the next spring, he was a major leaguer, and by 2011, he was fulfilling his destiny.

He was the Nationals' closer. He saved 43 games in 2011, and though he's not physically intimidating at 6-foot-2 and 180 pounds, his simple, stiff-legged delivery cut loose a heavy, tailing sinker and a sharp breaking ball, almost always impeccably placed low and on the edges of the strike zone.

So it is odd that as the calendar turns during the most consequential season in the franchise's short existence, Storen is not the closer.

After elbow surgery in spring training and a rehab process that consumed more than half the season, he's back pitching but still chasing his old form. "It's not where I'm normally at," Storen said. "But the fact that it's still early is exciting."

With most games, if the Nationals are nursing a narrow lead, Storen watches Tyler Clippard, his roommate and best friend on the team, do the job Storen was brought here to do. He sits in the bullpen in a most ill-defined role. He waits for the phone to ring. It could be in the sixth inning, could be the ninth, or anything in between.

And though Clippard has been a reliable replacement, manager Davey Johnson this week left the door open for Storen to reclaim at least a share of his old job. With Clippard in need of a day off, Storen saved his first game on Sunday. The Nats visit the Arizona Diamondbacks this weekend.

"Right now, I'm comfortable with Clip or Storen closing," Johnson said. "But Clip has had the hotter hand doing the brunt of the work. I'm not going to take anything away from him, because he's been so good."

A starter turned set-up man turned closer, Clippard was 23 of 27 in save opportunities as of Wednesday. But since Storen's return became imminent, Clippard's outings have rarely failed to threaten the cardiac health of the team and its fans. Three of Clippard's four blown saves have come since mid-July — Storen returned on July 19 — and his ERA has risen from 1.83 to 3.10.

Storen has allowed a run in only one of his 11 outings and posted a 2.57 ERA through Wednesday. For now, though, he must remain content with the designation Johnson placed on him this week: backup closer. DEREK TURNER (FOR EXPRESS)

D.C. United Adds Depth to Its Backfield

Major League Soccer

Depth at the fullback positions was already lacking for D.C. United. With recent injuries to both starters limiting the club's options, the team had almost no choice but to seek a trade that would provide coach Ben Olsen some cover.

So, on Thursday, D.C. traded a 2014 first-round supplemental draft pick to the Portland Timbers for veteran left back Mike Chabala.

"Mike is an experienced MLS defender who will immediately upgrade our depth at the left back position," D.C. United general manager Dave Kasper said in a statement.

Steady starter Daniel Woolard exited last weekend's match against Columbus with a concussion, and with starting right back Robbie Russell sidelined with a foot injury, Chris Korb was the only healthy natural fullback on the roster before the trade.

Chabala, 28, was a former teammate of Dwayne De Rosario and Danny Cruz in Houston before being traded to Portland last summer. He was used sparingly this season, appearing in just nine games, but he fills a need for the club, which had been using midfielders Andy Najar and Lewis Neal and even center back Dejan Jakovic as fill-in options at the outside back positions in recent matches.

Chabala will train with the club before Olsen decides whether to feature him in Saturday night's road match against Sporting Kansas City, the recently crowned U.S. Open Cup champions.

How to Nail A Group House Interview

Stand out from the pack in your first encounter with potential roommates

Group Houses

Daniela Aramayo, 25, recalls sitting, tribunal style, around a dinner table with five strangers, interviewing for a spot in a seven-bedroom group house in Mt. Pleasant where she now lives.

"I was a little intimidated because it's a house full of people who have this history, and you're the newcomer and have to prove yourself," Aramayo says.

Check out last week's story, "A Family You Can Choose," about group house living, at expressnightout.com.

Vying for an open room in a group house can be stressful — think job interview meets college application essay meets blind date.

If you're one of the lucky few whose initial email gets noticed — it's not uncommon for nearly a hundred people to email about a single available room — the next step is usually an interview with a phalanx of current housemates.

If you beat out the competition, the prize is cheaper rent and a new network of friends.

Group Houses

But it can be tough to stand out from the crowd. Here are a few tips from group house experts for getting noticed and getting in:

Work Your Network

“Use the power of networks,” says Debbie Kaplan of the rental website Urban Igloo. “Alumni networks, friends and Listservs; you just gotta get creative.”

The entry bar is lower for friends of friends, says renter Eric Sonnenberg. You’ll still have to win the approval of the other housemates, but having that connection is an advantage.

“That’s how I’ve found most of the places I’ve lived,” Sonnenberg says. “If you’re not the kind of person who can put [yourself] across well in a short interview, then it can be tricky to get in.”

nextweek

Looking for your very first place? In next week’s Ready to Rent, we’ll have all the tips new renters need to find a great first apartment.

Be a First Responder

If you go the Craigslist route, it’s no secret that the first few responders to a new post are more likely to catch people’s attention. It’s hard to stand out if you’re the 50th response from a young professional who enjoys barefoot running and craft beer.

Still, if you find a great spot that was posted more than a couple hours ago, it can’t hurt to respond. Just don’t get your hopes up.

Advice

No Introverts Allowed?

Shy people may be at a disadvantage when trying to charm strangers into letting them live in their homes. For shy group-house-hunters, it’s especially important to look for housemates you connect with and feel comfortable around. If you’re very introverted, group houses may not be for you. Be realistic about your ability to live in a social setting. There are other options for those who aren’t crazy about living with others but still want to save on rent. Consider living in an English basement or renting a room in a single-family home, says real estate expert Debbie Kaplan of Urban Igloo. (J.B.)

Shop Solo

Time was, you could get together with five friends and start a group house of your own. That’s much harder to do in today’s ultra-competitive rental market.

Be Yourself

If you’re invited for an interview, don’t put on a front just to impress your potential new roommates. If they don’t click with the real you, you won’t be happy in the long run.

“If we get to the end of the 45-minute [interview] and conversation has been flowing easily, or we feel like we can keep talking, then that’s a good candidate,” Konopacz says.

“Which isn’t to say that shy people can’t get into a group house,” Sonnenberg says. “They just have

Don’t Badmouth Your Past Roomies

If you clashed with a past housemate, the interview is not the time to highlight it.

“If they say awful things about their roommates, then that’s kind of a flag,” Sonnenberg says. “It’s the same as in a job interview. You’re not supposed to say too-negative of things about your previous jobs.”

Don’t Ask Too Many Questions

Group house veterans agree: A healthy amount of curiosity is a good sign you’re interested in the place, but it shouldn’t feel like you’re the one interviewing them.

“Sometimes people would come in and ask us a bunch of questions, like they were going to decide whether they wanted us,” renter Jacob Moschler says.

Be Enthusiastic

Genuine enthusiasm can give a potential housemate the edge, the renters say.

“The people who usually got it were the ones who wanted it so bad that while we were deliberating and interviewing others, would call back every night and check,” group house veteran Jacob Moschler says.

“If we get to the end of the 45-minute [interview] and ... we feel like we can keep talking, then that’s a good candidate.”

— LAUREN KONOPACZ, WHO JUST MOVED OUT OF A FIVE-PERSON GROUP HOUSE IN MT. VERNON SQUARE

Aramayo says she expressed interest in the Mt. Pleasant group house immediately after the interview and got the spot the following day.

Sell Yourself, Not Your Stuff

While it’s OK to demonstrate what “stuff” you can bring to a group house — maybe a TV or a new toaster — don’t make it feel like a transaction, Konopacz says.

“I meet a lot of people who think that their material belongings are going to get them the ‘in,’” she says. “I don’t really care what you have. I care what you bring in terms of personality.” JESSICA BYLANDER (FOR EXPRESS)

POTTER STYLE

Kelley Lilien

STYLE BLOGGER, COCKTAIL MAVEN

On her popular fashion/entertaining/decor blog — Mrs. Lilien Styling House (Blog.mrslilien.com) — LA style diva Kelley Lilien runs photo-filled “recipes” for everything from a well-stocked medicine cabinet to a fab dinner-party outfit. The proponent of ladylike, cheeky chic also mixes a mean highball, a talent celebrated in her clever new “Cocktail Swatchbook” ($15, Potter Style).

What's the secret to mixing a good cocktail?

It's nice to give people a surprise, something that'll open their minds. And using the best quality liquor you can afford helps.

Why are cocktails back in style?

Cocktails represent such an amazing, classy, old-school culture that I'd hate to see disappear. Cocktails never go out of fashion.

The book features both recipes and photos of what to serve them in. Why is that necessary?

Anyone can go to the BevMo and get mojito in a can. But I think that if you go through the ceremony of concocting, mixing and blending a cocktail, you have to dress it up. Every drink you do should be a celebration, so stick a fruit kebab in it or throw in a cocktail olive.

How can I outfit a home bar?

Invest in some fine vintage glasses. I like the ones by Dorothy Thorpe, which are metallic and go from dark to light. Every drink tastes better out of them. And don't use those horrifying wine charms — they're tacky-town USA.

Why throw a cocktail party?

Parties massage the human spirit — and they're such a great excuse to be fancy and put on gaudy earrings. And cocktail parties tend to be about mixing, mingling and shimmying a little.

“Parties massage the human spirit — and they're such a great excuse to be fancy and put on gaudy earrings.”

Any advice on how to dress for a fancy bash?

Wear something that you're physically comfortable in — if you can't breathe, you'll get indigestion. I say walk on the bolder side, and wear something you'd love to see someone else in. Just walk into the party like you own it, and you can get away with anything, even a hot-pink wig.

What's your favorite soiree get-up?

I love a long vintage gown, something that brushes the floor and shows off my neck and shoulders. And I like to take it a step further with the biggest jewelry I can find.

What can spoil a party?

Perhaps a gauche guest? Or inappropriate religious or political conversation? But one thing that can make a party is a guest who has a little too much to drink and is open and free with the gossip.

BAD HAIR DAYS can strike at any time. Be prepared with the Weller hat from Nobis, the fashion-forward Canadian outerwear retailer ($50, Nobis.ca). IT'S A TALE AS OLD as time:

Girl meets boy. Boy asks girl out on date. Girl gets a raging zit in the middle of her forehead the morning of the date. Clarisonic's new Acne Clarifying Collection ensures a happy ending with a powerful-yet-gentle oscillating facial buffer and a salicylic-acid acne cleanser that dries and clears blemishes ($169, Clarisonic.com).

Grab Bag

4 Seine Ideas

LIVING IN A GARRET

in Paris sounds dreamy. But if moving to France isn't possible, you can still deck your apartment with linens that will remind you of the City of Light. Maryland-based Blissliving Home's newest bed and bath collection riffs on Gallic style with duvet covers in toile decked with images of Parisian landmarks ($275-$295, Blisslivinghome.com), polka-dotted shower curtains ($135) and throw pillows festooned with Coco Chanel-ish lace (shown, $85 each). Whether you take to wearing a beret around the house is up to you, chérie.

3 Nautical Notions

UNLIKE A CONCH shell, you won't hear the ocean when you put a pair of Kiel James Patrick's silk-covered earrings up to your lobes. But the nautical-inspired images like fish (shown), mermaids and sea horses certainly make you feel at-one with the ocean. Created in Rhode Island using top-quality silks, the adorable pops of color just washed ashore at Bishop Boutique ($25, 815-B King St., Alexandria; 571-312-0042). They look just as appropriate with a crisp white shirt as they do with a yellow polka-dot bikini.

5 Sweets for The Heat

IT'S SO STEAMY OUT that the effort of transforming farmers market fruit into a treat seems huge. OVEN. SO. HOT. SHORTCAKE. RECIPE. SO. HARD. Heritage Delight's meringue nests (12 for $6, Whole Foods) serve as a crunchy base for sliced peaches, blackberries or, heck, a gallon or so of chocolate sauce. The cookie-size sweets have only 30 calories and 0 grams of fat each, a good thing, since you'll barely lift a finger turning them into dessert.

Dear Manolo

ANSWERS FROM THE SHOE BLOGGER

In September, my employer is sending me out to the North Dakota oil patch for two weeks of tours, meetings and familiarization with this part of its business. I'm a city girl from New York, so what do I know? I've been told that I'll need boots for the visits to the work sites. Please recommend something appropriate. —JENNIFER

Manolo says, asking the Manolo for advice on what to wear to the North Dakota oil rig is like asking the peacock how to fish for the herring. He might have the theoretical understanding of the process but could offer no practical advice.

However, from what the Manolo has heard, the oil boom part of the North Dakota is currently the manliest place in the entire 48 lower states, filled to bursting with manly working men going about their oily business as truck drivers, roustabouts, tool pushers and other assorted roughnecks.

And it is not just manly by occupation, but also because so many workingmen have poured into the region over the past two years that women are now greatly outnumbered in that part of the state.

Which means, of course, that no matter what the Manolo's friend wears, she will be considered one of the most attractive and stylish women in town.

Here is the Timberland Pro-Titan 6" ($125, Zappos.com) with the safety toe, which will look smart with your jeans as you tromp through the mud of North Dakota.

Ask the Manolo a question at manolo@shoeblogs.com. Visit the Manolo at shoeblogs.com.

More Empty Promises

Despite Will Ferrell and Zach Galifianakis' talents, 'The Campaign' falls flat

Film Review

The excesses of partisan sniping, negative campaigning and pandering skullduggery are the comic equivalent of fish in a barrel, and every last minnow gets picked off in "The Campaign," in which Will Ferrell and Zach Galifianakis play North Carolina candidates going head-to-head in a farcically conniving congressional election.

If only because of the actors involved, "The Campaign" has its share of laughs, which in a script penned by Chris Henchy and Shawn Harwell tends toward the broadest possible takes on slapstick, sophomoric sexuality and post-"Hangover" raunch. The film even possesses a whiff of topicality, in the form of Dan Aykroyd and John Lithgow playing two superwealthy, sweatshop-owning brothers who try to rig the election by infusing a super PAC with scads of money. Their name: Motch, rhymes with Koch, when Koch rhymes with "scotch," which they imbibe like so much Coke.

But with the exception of that timely echo — and Ferrell's flawless John Edwards impersonation as a handsome, compulsively promiscuous Democratic politician — genuinely scathing satire is largely missing in "The Campaign," which prefers silly, outre jokes and sight gags to a truly penetrating critique of partisan politics.

As "The Campaign" opens, Ferrell's character, a vapid smoothie named Cam Brady, is preparing to address yet one more adoring crowd of fans. What he will talk about? "America, Jesus, freedom," his three-word

Comedy icons Zach Galifianakis, left, and Will Ferrell try to find the humor of a congressional race in "The Campaign."

"I ran for school president in sixth grade and I lost. I stopped trying after that. My mom forced me to run. I thought I was going to win. I was cocky and it didn't go my way."

— GALIFIANAKIS TELLS REUTERS ABOUT HIS LONE VENTURE INTO POLITICS

"The thought of punching a baby is so horrifying to me. But I had to get over that, so in preparation, I punched adorable puppies and other cute infant animals."

— FERRELL, TO ENTERTAINMENT WEEKLY, ON A SCENE IN "THE CAMPAIGN"

answer to every question.

The Christian right comes in for even more skewering when a local tourism board director named Marty Huggins (Galifianakis) arrives on the scene, having been hand-picked by the Motches to challenge Cam in the upcoming election. His suggestively mincing gait, love of pugs and high-pitched lisp notwithstanding, Marty is happily married with two kids, and the Huggins' devout family dinner hour is the setting for one of "The Campaign's" most over-the-top set pieces, wherein the boys confess anything they might have done that could compromise their father's run for office. Later, in a debate, he announces his fealty to "the greatest American who ever lived: Jesus Christ." (You've already seen "The Campaign's" other stand-out moment, when Cam takes baby-kissing to unexpectedly pugilistic extremes, since that scene has been replayed to death in ads.)

Such are the cheap 'n' easy shots that comprise most of "The Campaign," which escalates into an increasingly absurdist war of mutually assured character assassination on the part of Cam and Marty, the latter of whom is being advised by a sharky eminence grise played by Dylan McDermott.

It's not that there's no fun to be had in "The Campaign," and the film can't be accused of partisan bias: Democrats are as likely to take partisan glee in the film's depiction of the amoral Motches as Republicans are in Cam's self-righteous hypocrisy. And Ferrell — adding a dash of his George W. Bush imitation when Cam announces, "Schools is this nation's backbone" — develops a simpatco rhythm with Galifianakis.

Still, there's no escaping the sense that "The Campaign" missed a chance to be swifter, smarter and more stinging, especially considering that director Jay Roach is behind HBO's far more alert and adroitly executed "Recount" and "Game Change."

In a way, "The Campaign" is the comic side of the same coin occupied by last year's "The Ides of March" — a respectable piece of mainstream entertainment but one that fell short of the insight and ambition required to be a movie that singularly captured its time. Like so many of the seasonal rituals that inspired its title, "The Campaign" could have used some tough reforms before asking filmgoers for their votes.

Jeremy Renner stars as Aaron Cross, who, as "The Bourne Legacy" opens, is finishing up a challenging training regimen.

'Bourne' Again

Jeremy Renner deftly steps in to refresh the successful spy series

Film Review

"The Bourne Legacy" looks bad on paper. The fourth installment of the hugely successful franchise starring Matt Damon as the memory-depleted assassin Jason Bourne does not star Damon, doesn't even feature his character and does not arrive by way of director Paul Greengrass, whose jagged, shaky-camera visual technique became as identifiable a marker of the series as Damon's appealingly vulnerable hero.

But — surprise, surprise — "The Bourne Legacy" looks astoundingly good on-screen. Written and directed by Tony Gilroy, who penned all three Jason Bourne movies, "The Bourne Legacy" achieves its first order of business with intelligence and imaginative dexterity, building on the preexisting story, expanding its human capital and geography, and leaving plenty of white space for Jason to jump back in if Damon ever decides to return.

And Gilroy has fulfilled the movie's second requirement with similar success, casting Jeremy Renner in a leading role that asks him to carry "The Bourne Legacy" while easily co-existing with the titular ghost that haunts the franchise.

Gilroy's most brilliant stroke of insight with "Legacy" was to set it within the reality of "The Bourne Ultimatum," the most recent of the movies that ended with Our Man at large in Manhattan.

"Legacy" opens thousands of miles away in Alaska, where another agent, Aaron Cross (Renner), is finishing a grueling training regimen, tramping over snowy wilderness and taking mysterious pills.

How are Jason and Aaron related? Why are shadowy figures so worried about him? What does an attractive genetic scientist played by Rachel Weisz have to do with it? And can Renner look as cool leading an epic motorcycle chase through Manila as Damon did leading an epic car chase through Moscow in "The Bourne Supremacy"?

The answer is yes, even if the motorbike chase goes on too long.

Whether there will be more productions depends on "Bourne" fans' willingness to let go of Jason and throw down with Aaron. With "The Bourne Legacy," Gilroy has brought characteristic taste and skill to a nearly impossible task: embracing the past without completely erasing it, thereby creating an invitingly complicated and open-ended future.

One of my favorite long takes — those scenes when the camera doesn't look away — comes at the end of the 1996 film "Big Night." In it, two brothers make and then eat an omelet. Because it comes at the end of a frenetic movie depicting a frenetic night, this extended moment of rest is almost unbearably tense.

Another of my favorite long takes is in Michelangelo Antonioni's "Story of a Love Affair."

The camera pans 360 degrees in 3½ minutes. Compared to "Avatar," no, it's not technically impressive. But in 1950, it was a Chris Nolan-style move.

There are so many great directors working today that, unless you're taking a film history course, it's easy to convince yourself that modern filmmaking started with Tarantino. But you've got a chance this weekend to see Antonioni's films for free, and you should take it. (The National Gallery of Art's retrospective runs through Sept. 3.)

Disclaimer: Hitchcock hated Antonioni's work. It's not bubblegum fare. You could live the rest of your life happily without seeing any Antonioni. But you've got nothing to lose except an hour and a half, and you might find yourself unable to look away.

Rashida Jones, left, who co-wrote "Celeste and Jesse Forever," stars as a woman who is divorcing her husband and best friend (Andy Samberg, right).

Celeste and Jesse Forever (R)

Like a younger, trendier version of "It's Complicated," this romantic comedy aspires to be an ode to unresolved feelings. Which makes it all the more disappointing when "Celeste and Jesse Forever" — which Rashida Jones co-wrote and stars in — turns into another summer film in which an attractive, ambitious young woman is punished for not accepting the man-child in her life despite his flaws. ANN HORNADAY (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Easy Money (R)

Crime thriller meets cautionary tale in this riveting Swedish film — starring Matias Varela, Dragomir Mrcic and Joel Kinnaman — which warns moviegoers about greed, one of the seven deadly sins. Most viewers don't necessarily need the reminder, but rarely are the avalanche-like effects of avarice so vividly and terrifyingly brought to life as they are here.

STEPHANIE MERRY (TWP)

The Impostor (R)

In 1994, 13-year-old Nicholas Barclay vanished from his San Antonio neighborhood. Three years later, a kid in a Spanish children's home claimed to be Nicholas. It's not a spoiler to reveal that he was lying; after all, the gripping, twist-packed documentary that tells this story is titled "The Imposter." What's most fascinating about it are the movie's larger questions about why some people tell impossible lies — and why others believe them. MARK JENKINS (TWP)

Anthony Hopkins is part of the ensemble in the sprawling, multi-narrative "360."

360 (R)

It's not easy to make a successful multi-narrative ensemble drama. When the genre works, a collection of small stories add up to compelling revelations about big, important themes. When the approach doesn't come together, it tends to look like "360." The globe-trotting movie touts a long list of big names, including "City of God" director Fernando Meirelles and actors Rachel Weisz, Anthony Hopkins and Jude Law. And though the cinematography looks sleek, with split screens and city lights that blur and sharpen, the stories equate to a tangled mess. S.M. (TWP)

THE AMAZING SPIDER-MAN (PG-13, 138 minutes) "The Amazing Spider-Man" has been billed as a reboot of the Spider-Man franchise. The not-so-great news is that by "reboot," the studio means taking audiences once again through every step of Peter's transformation, including the fateful mutant spider bite, an equally pivotal incident involving his beloved uncle and those first wobbly forays discovering his superhuman powers. The result is that, for its first hour, it subjects viewers to an origin story they may already know. Thankfully, things pick up considerably once Peter dons the famous skintight suit. A.H. THE DARK KNIGHT RISES (PG-13, 164 minutes) Christopher Nolan has made a completely satisfying movie, one steeped enough in self-contained mythology to reward hard-core fans while giving less invested viewers a rousing, adroitly executed piece of popcorn entertainment. The film starts off with a nervy piece of midair showmanship in which the movie's villain, a terrorist thug named Bane, hijacks a CIA plane. Bane makes almost immediately for Gotham

City, where Bruce Wayne (Christian Bale) has been living in wounded seclusion for the past eight years, since he took the rap for killing a city hero. "The Dark Knight Rises" ends on a self-important note that would be insufferable if Nolan and Bale hadn't so clearly earned it. A.H. DIARY OF A WIMPY KID: DOG DAYS (PG, 94 minutes) Champions of Jeff Kinney's best-selling "Wimpy Kid" books series can celebrate the fact that the major creative players — including "Rodrick Rules" director David Bowers — return to ensure that "Dog Days" trots down the same humorous paths carved by its predecessors. But my, how they're changing. Greg and his best friend, Rowley (Robert Capron), are ready for eighth grade, but not before they fill their summer vacation with video-game marathons, pool parties at the neighborhood country club and — if Greg's lucky — some one-on-one time with his schoolgirl crush. "Dog Days" rarely strays from its core mission of imparting valuable life lessons as it reenacts the perils of pre-pubescence. SEAN O'CONNELL ICE AGE: CONTINENTAL DRIFT (PG, 87 minutes) The fourth "Ice Age" freshens up the 10-year-old franchise by shunning easy pop-culture jokes and embracing its weird side. Previous "Ice Age" installments drew inspiration from our planet's climate changes, and "Continental Drift" is no different. Here, fissures caused by volcanic fault lines separate franchise regulars Sid, Diego and Manny from the latter's family—wife, Ellie, and teenage daughter, Peaches. Efforts to reunite at a sinking land bridge force Manny and crew to battle a menacing ape who rules the Seven Seas from his pirate-ship-shaped iceberg. s.o. KILLER JOE (NC-17, 102 minutes) This misadventure begins when dumb but decisive Chris Smith finds himself in debt to an impatient drug dealer. His solution is to kill his mother for the insurance money, which he expects will be paid to his malleable younger sister. Chris enlists Joe Cooper (Matthew McConaughey), an icy-grinned Dallas cop with a sideline gig in assassination. Bringing Joe into the scheme is Chris' second big mistake, but it's to the movie's benefit. McConaughey turns the oily charm of his "Magic Mike" character utterly rancid, yet his performance seduces as much as it repels. MARK JENKINS

MADAGASCAR 3: EUROPE'S MOST WANTED (PG, 93 minutes) The third outing in the popular series of animated adventures about Alex the lion, Marty the zebra, Melman the giraffe and Gloria the hippo may be the best of the bunch. To escape from Monaco — where our heroes have traveled from Africa searching for the airplane they hope will take them home — an order is given to shake the Monte Carlo animal control officer who is determined to stop them from leaving. A parade of laughs? That, you expect. What's really surprising about "Madagascar 3" is just how moving it ultimately is, largely because of the emotionally engaging character animation. M.O. MOONRISE KINGDOM (PG-13, 93 minutes) "Moonrise Kingdom" opens with no music — just the sound of raindrops falling on the roof of a preternaturally cozy house, which the camera gently leads the audience through. As explained by a nameless narrator, "Moonrise Kingdom" will chronicle the adventures of Sam and Suzy, each of whom is woefully misunderstood by the adults in his or her life. As he's done in all of his films, Wes Anderson confects a distinctive mix of arch humor and solemnity in "Moonrise Kingdom," in which Sam and Suzy confront death, abandonment and burgeoning sexuality in very real terms. A.H. STEP UP REVOLUTION (PG-13, 97 minutes) Despite its title, audiences shouldn't expect anything revolutionary from the fourth chapter in the "Step Up" franchise. Director Scott Speer transports audiences to Miami, where poor but virtuous dancers Sean (Ryan Guzman) and Eddy (Misha Gabriel) strategically plan flash mobs around South Beach's stylish neighborhoods. They dance to express themselves, but also to get their video clips on YouTube. s.o. TOTAL RECALL (PG-13, 118 minutes) Please erase from your minds the first "Total Recall." Then watch the 2012 version which, like the original, is loosely based on the 1966 Philip K. Dick story about a guy in the not-too-distant future attempting to escape his ordinariness by injecting more exciting memories into his cerebrum. Douglas Quaid resides on planet Earth circa 2084 and wants to be someone else. That desire is what takes him to Rekall, a memory-adjustment business that's New Age-ier in this version but just as capable of wreaking mega havoc. The 2012 "Total Recall" is superior, but it still has more than its share of flaws. JEN CHANEY

THE WATCH (R, 98 minutes) With Colorado and the rest of the country still reeling, some viewers might not find blithe shoot-em-ups in "The Watch" as much fun as they might have a few weeks ago. Then again, the premise of the movie is so goofy, the performances so winningly wacky, that a willing — indeed, eager — suspension of disbelief has rarely been easier. As "The Watch" opens, Evan (Ben Stiller) explains in a voice-over why he's so happy in the suburban idyll of Glenview, Ohio, where he manages a nearby Costco and pursues a devotion on civic engagement that borders on the obsessive. When one of his night watchmen is gruesomely killed on the job, Evan immediately organizes a group to prevent further attacks. A.H.

We're now used to James Cameron-esque painstaking historical re-creation, but in 1965, the accurate vintage aircraft of the British film "Those Magnificent Men in Their Flying Machines or How I Flew From London to Paris in 25 Hours 11 Minutes" were a big deal. The film, about a pioneering airplane race, offers up screwball humor and large British mustaches. AFI Silver, 8633 Colesville Road, Silver Spring; Sat. and Sun., $7-$11.50; 301-495-6720, Afi.com/silver. # 'Wheels' Starts to Turn

AMC's railroad drama picks up the pace for its second season

Premieres

SUN 9:00 "Hell on Wheels" (9 p.m., AMC) returns for a second season. Happily, the post-Civil War railroad drama appears to have picked up the pace. But don't expect it to abandon its dependence on familiar themes from classic Westerns.

The new season begins with a train heist by embittered ex-Confederates and the beating death of a prostitute. The basic cable drama does a good job of walking the fine line between the brutal profanity of "Deadwood" and the lofty grandeur of "Lonesome Dove."

Former rebel Cullen Bohannon (Anson Mount) and freed

slave Elam Ferguson (Common) share similar stories of personal reinvention and redemption in a world dominated by money, personified by railroad tycoon Doc Durant (Colm Meaney) — often seen trailing clouds of sulfuric smoke, just in case you missed the "Hell" in the show's title.

If "Hell" attracts a fraction of the audience that tuned in to the History Channel's violent (if plodding) miniseries "Hatfields & McCoy's," you can expect its "Wheels" to keep spinning for some time.

Shark Week

25 Years of Terror

Like back-to-school sales at the mall, Discovery's Shark Week arrives to remind us that summer won't last forever. Now in its 25th year, the cable tradition commences with "Air Jaws Apocalypse" (9 p.m. Sunday) about the search for an alpha white shark that dominates the waters off Seal Island, South Africa. "Shark Week's Impossible Shots" (10 p.m.) follows. (UU)

Best Bets

FRI 10:00

Common Law (USA) Let it all out, guys — you'll feel better. In an effort to get back on the good side of Dr. Ryan and the therapy group, Wes and Travis (Michael Ealy, left) decide to come clean about what got them into counseling.

SAT 9:00

Tanked (AFL) Wayne and Brett get a call from comedian Tracy Morgan regarding a custom fish tank for his home. But when they find that he wants a huge tank to fit into his tight basement, they know they have a major job ahead of them.

SUN 10:00

The Comedy Central Roast (COM) Jane Lynch is roast-master for this new comic thrashing of comedian and macadamia nut farmer Roseanne Barr. "Good luck finding anything about me to make fun of," Barr says. "I've never made a mistake or offended anyone in my life!"

SUN 10:38

Animal Practice (NBC) Following the Olympic Closing Ceremonies from London, NBC presents a sneak peek of this new fall comedy series. Justin Kirk, right, stars as Dr. George Coleman, a New York veterinarian with an unorthodox style. (TRIBUNE MEDIA)

Horoscope

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may be somewhat bewildered by what someone close to you is trying to do. What is even more confusing is how he or she is trying to do it!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A common task may be far more difficult to accomplish today than it will be tomorrow or the day after — but can it wait?

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) What is done incorrectly can always be corrected — but it requires a full understanding of how and why the error was made.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) What you do over and over again will give you the most satisfaction once it becomes somehow automatic. Practice can make perfect!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You may have to put yourself front and center in order to attract attention to an issue that really needs to be addressed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You can combine business and pleasure with some success — but take care you don't overindulge at any one point. Balance is key.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Your humor can set things right today when others decide an issue is worth fighting over. There's no room for such conflict.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You may have to go back and forth between your own work, and doing something for a friend that only you can do. Schedule carefully!

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're waiting on another to come through in the nick of time — even though the whole thing has really been thought out well in advance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may be able to do something better than the so-called experts today. You've been doing your homework — and it shows.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Take care that you don't criticize others for doing the very things you are usually guilty of.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll be able to have the advantage eventually, but during much of the day you may feel as though you are behind the proverbial eight-ball.

FOUR RACK TOTAL

Make a 2-7 letter word from the letters in each row. Add points of each word using scoring directions at right. Seven-letter words get a 50-point bonus. Blank tiles used as any letter have no point value. Scrabble is a trademark of Hasbro in the U.S. and Canada.

BABY WEIGHT*ISO Nanny to Watch This Baby While I Work Out

Kristin Cavallari is a new mom. The former star of MTV reality shows "Laguna Beach" and "The Hills" has given birth to her first child, a boy named Camden Jack Cutler. The baby's father is Cavallari's fiancé, Chicago Bears quarterback Jay Cutler. The 25-year-old Cavallari wrote Wednesday on Twitter that she was "thrilled." (EXPRESS)

MOTIVES*'And By the Way, Here's My Demo CD'

As soon as news of Randy Travis' arrest broke, fans brought him clothes, posted his bond, arranged for his transportation and offered him legal services, TMZ.com reported. The Texas Longhorns hat Travis was wearing when he left the jail in Sherman, Texas, was a gift from an attorney, TMZ.com said. Officials said Travis was naked and combative when arrested Tuesday night. (EXPRESS)

UGH, OSCARS*Being Asked Is Embarrassing Enough

Jimmy Fallon says he was asked to host next year's Academy Awards but declined the gig. The talk-show host told Matt Lauer on Wednesday that "it's an honor to be asked by the academy, but it's not my year." The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences did not respond to requests for comment. Meanwhile, last year's Oscar host, Billy Crystal, tells USA Today he would be open to returning for a 10th turn at leading the ceremony. "The door is open," he said. "I had a very good time this last time." (EXPRESS)

CHARITY*Hospital Patients Love Slightly Melted Chocolate!

Robert Pattinson fans are sending the heartbroken star notes, flowers, chocolates and other gifts, according to Radaronline.com. Pattinson is sending the gifts to hospitals and senior citizens' homes, an unnamed source said. "Robert has been incredibly touched by the support he has received from the Twihards," said the source. "Robert didn't feel like he deserved any of the presents and didn't want them going to waste." (EXPRESS)
